

TO OWN A HOUSE AND GET RICH

Yee attributes his success to a support group and property investment knowledge

FOR the past 20 years, former remisier Peter Yee has been teaching his seminar participants how to become rich in buying property based on his personal experience in property investment.

He attributes his success in property investment to his "mastermind group" that he help formed, after a seminar he attended 10 years ago.

Yee believes that with the same support system and property investment knowledge, his own seminar participants should see equal or better results than what he has achieved.

His unique teaching method includes one-to-one personal coaching to clarify a participant's property investment plan and strategies.

The two-day "How You Can Become Rich in Property during Market Downturn" seminar is based on his two books; "You can Become Rich in Property" and "The Certain Way to Life's Riches."

In his seminar, Yee helps participants form their own Property Investment Support group to continue their learning, and apply what they have learnt during the seminar.

Yee believes that with the same support system and property investment knowledge, participants should see equal or better results than what he has achieved.

The group is encouraged to meet once a week for two months after the seminar.

To further support the participants, a reunion is organised where they are able to share their achievements, learnings and play his award-winning "success" board game.

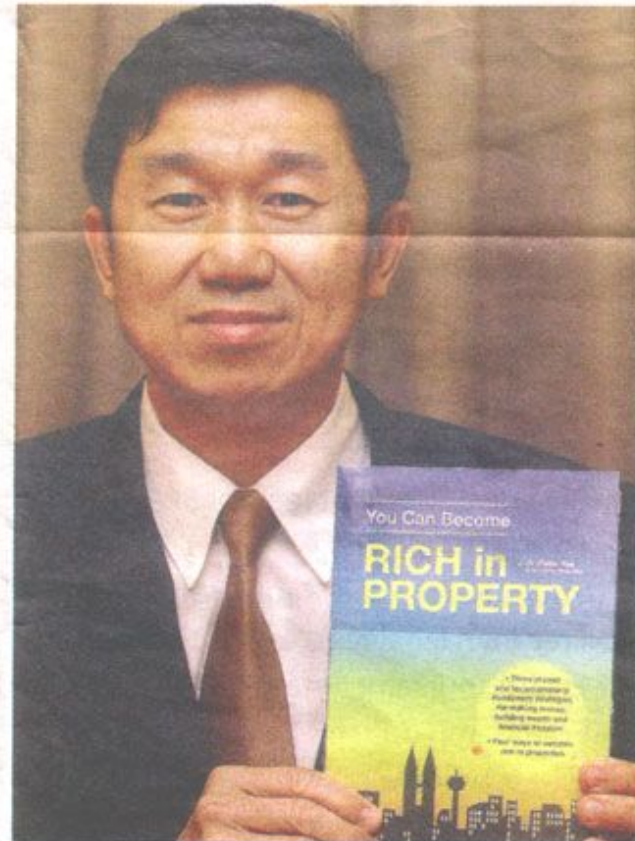

He believes property investment is one of the low-risk investment vehicles that can produce not only monthly income but also potential capital gain.

One can achieve financial freedom when the passive income from property investment is more than his or her living expenses. It is easier to balance your life when you are financially free.

"You will become richer if you know the characteristics of investment grade property and what is a good location and own property that has increased in price or gain capital," he said.
